After earning your bachelor's degree with DeVry, you may be eligible for up to four course exemptions at DeVry University's Keller Graduate School of Management. This would enable you to earn your master's degree by completing 11-12 courses rather than the normal 15-16 courses. Imagine what that would mean in terms of time and tuition savings.

Become a CPA.
In the field of accounting, many students continue their studies to become CPAs. By transferring to DeVry, you'll put yourself in a position to continue right on to our Keller Graduate School of Management. The bottom line is, in as few as 3½ years after earning your associate degree, you could earn your bachelor's and master's degrees and have completed CPA exam preparation coursework that integrates the Becker CPA Review methodology.

Our accounting students tell it best!
Here's what students and alumni have to say about their educational experiences at DeVry and Keller.

"The professors were great and because they were actually employed in the field of accounting. The classes were that much more interesting because the professors used real-life examples."

"At DeVry, everything you study will be part of your work some day, and the professors make a point of connecting the knowledge to work. It's easier to learn when you know it's definitely going to be part of your career at some point."

"While I finished my degree, Career Services helped me find part-time work that was really close to my accounting major. It've helped me build a resume while I was still in school."

"While I was at DeVry, I met with a representative at Keller who put my mind at ease about transitioning. I did not have to take the GMAT exam and the Becker CPA Review methodology was incorporated into CPA exam preparation courses that were part of the curriculum."
